

knithawk for spotting defects in knitted fabrics - right where and when they happen

Fewer rejects - lower costs -
increased sustainability

our performance for your profit

Existing single jersey machines can be equipped with knithawk, a tool for optical textile monitoring during the manufacturing process. It checks and detects defects in the knits right where and when they happen - at the knitting point.

knithawk identifies imperfections such as spot defects, vertical defects, horizontal defects and defects in elastomeric plating in single jersey structures.

Detection of most common knitting defects

Inspection directly at the knitting point.
